WELCOME TO GUNTHER DEDMUND'S BASEMENT SUBLET OF HORROR SCRAPBOOK

Joel Sanderson has been re-editing films and producing live events for the past thirty years throughout Kansas. His earliest film production was called the Escape' Drive-in an outdoor drive-in themed event featuring film, live music and performance art which began in 1989. In 1993 his shows moved indoors and became the M.T. Pockets Budget Film Festival with a three year run at the Freestate Brewery in Lawrence Kansas, followed by an eight-year run at the Wichita Center for the Arts, where the show expanded to include live music and performance elements.

Since he grew up watching horror hosts he always hoped to be able to become one. The name for my character Gunther Dedmund came from a dream he had in 1983. In the dream he was watching a television show where the host was in a hovering desk mounted in a kind of flying saucer, the show was called Gunther Dedmund's Floating Spaceship. The original concept for a horror host television program was pretty involved and the plan was to show all types of movies, but due to an extreme lack of funds, Joel decided to focus on one type of movies, horror films. After twenty years of collecting and editing films, his basement had become a ready-made set for a movie show. In 2005, Gunther Dedmund was dusted off for a new task.

The Basement Sublet of Horror is based on his interest in vintage horror hosts especially The Host and Rodney, which ran from the late 1950s through the 1970s and starred Tom Lehey Jr. Instead of your typical castle setting, the show takes place in the basement apartment in a 1950s Ranch style home. Gunther Dedmund has lived in the basement apartment and has resided there so long that his skin has turned white from lack of exposure to daylight. It is based on a long tradition of late-night television horror movie hosts that began in the 1950s with Vampira. The Basement Sublet of Horror brings a new perspective to the genre with a more tongue in cheek approach.

The basement is full of films from the 1950s and 1960s that Gunther has shown on public access TV channels across the country. Gunther, The Film Butcher (a name he gained by destroying the only remaining 16mm print of a film called Hula Hoop Skills, during the M.T. Pockets run at The Wichita Center for the Arts), also splices together movies to create his own versions of horror and sci-fi films for his show. The feature films used for the show are altered and intercut with cartoons, educational and instructional films in such a way to create a new condensed feature that collages visual puns and humorous subplots. In between movie segments, there are occasional appearances of neighbors, landlords, aliens, mind repair technicians, even musical guests. Gunther likes to think of his shows as a mix of education and entertainment.

It's obvious that Gunther Dedmund is a huge packrat, if you've seen his basement on the television show, you know what we mean. We've spent a lot of time digging through the thousands of files and photos from BSOH that have built up over the years. Putting this issue was quite an experience, a very nostalgic journey for Gunther. - Richard Wayne, 2018

The Host and Rodney Go Golfing

Tom Leahy played The Host on the Kansas based show Nightmare which ran off and on from the 1950s through to a revival in the mid 1990s. Although the actors who played his sidekick Rodney changed over the years, Tom was always a fixture of the show. Tom Leahy passed away on June 19, 2010.

Here's the sign being pulled into position by ropes hanging from a tree. You could see the sign for miles away, so finding the show out in the country wasn't a problem.

Joel began showing movies at art exhibits in the early 1980s, displaying his re-edited 16mm films and slide-shows. The Escape' Drive-in began in Lawrence, Kansas after he moved there to finish out his college degree. That show was a drive-in movie themed event with live music and a prize drawing. It was held in Vinland, Kansas in the backyard of the local residents.

Below: Alex Hamilton, left, a manager at Free State Brewery, and Joel Sanderson, the projectionist for the film fest, talk about their weekly venture.

Projecting an image

● Movies made from discarded film clips are a weekly attraction at a downtown business.

By JAN BILES
JOURNAL-WORLD ARTS EDITOR

Joel Sanderson may be Lawrence's version of Ed Wood.

OK, his films aren't that bizarre, and he doesn't direct any washed-up actors such as Bela Lugosi.

But the Kansas University sculpture graduate has a knack for making unusual, low-budget films — films that are shown every Wednesday night at the M.T. Pockets Budget Film Fest at Free State Brewing Co., 636 Mass.

"In the beginning, people had no idea what was going on."

— Alex Hamilton

"Everything I use comes from the trash or from sales," Sanderson said Wednesday night during an interview in a projection booth on the east side of Liberty Hall.

In the booth are a 16 mm reel-to-reel film projector and a slide projector, from which Sanderson's images are beamed through two portholes onto a large screen about 40 feet away in the brewery's beer garden. Wednesday night's fare included two 15-minute films: "Let's Do Lunch," a compilation of school cafeteria and food images, and "Janet Goes Shopping," a collection of commercials from the 1970s.

Sanderson said he emulated H.G. Wells when it came to the creative process.

Wells would write down ideas on pieces of paper and then toss them into a jar. When the jar was full, he weaved the ideas together into a novel.

Likewise, Sanderson said he sorts film clips into bags according to their themes. When the bag is nearly full, he picks through the clips and splices them with cartoons to make his cinematic creations.

"I use grade school and high school films with sections of feature films," he said. Most of the educational films were made in the 1950s and '60s. The cartoons are non-collectibles from the 1930s.

Budding filmmaker

Sanderson was bitten by the movie bug when he was a boy, and he's been scratching that itch ever since.

He showed black-and-white 8 mm films in his family's garage when he was in grade school. Admission was a quarter. His mother supplied freshly popped popcorn.

When he was 17, he worked at the K-42 Drive-in in Wichita. One day, the projectionist decided to take a break and turned over his duties to the teen-ager. Sanderson said he remembered the projectionist sitting calmly in his car while Sanderson fumbled with the film.

But that didn't dampen his love for the movie business. He went on to work as a manager at the 50 South Drive-in in Emporia, where he began chopping up film to kill time during feature movies and later discovered the fun of putting the pieces together in their unintended order.

From 1990 to 1994, Sanderson operated the Escape Drive-in, an outdoor movie theater in Vinland. He started out showing his films to about 40 people. At the end of the four years, the audience had grown to 275.

Julcin' up the garden

M.T. Pockets Budget Film Fest is the brainchild of Sanderson and Alex Hamilton, a manager at Free State Brewery.

In 1989 while Sanderson was working as a part-time projectionist at Liberty Hall, he discovered that the eastward-looking projection booth was not being used. Why not use it to show movies in the beer garden below? After all, he said, the land where the beer garden stands originally was designed to be used by Liberty Hall as a third theater.

Just one problem: The booth belonged to Liberty Hall; the beer garden belonged to the brewery. That's when Hamilton got involved.

"Between the two of us, it really started happening," Hamilton said.

The first film fest ran last year from late June to late September.

"In the beginning, people had no idea what was going on," Hamilton said.

The films, which are PG-rated, start showing at 9 p.m. There's no admission charge.

"Cutting up film is nothing new," Sanderson said. "It's been going on since the '60s."

"But the environment where they're showing is new," Hamilton interjected. "You can't go to any other restaurant and get a sandwich and listen to music and watch films, but the brewery is different. It's a unique situation."

In addition to the movies, the brewery also features Bill Crahan and Jon Lomas, known for their light bluegrass and jazz, on Thursday nights and the Free State Jazz Quartet on Friday nights.

"We're trying to get more modern music and local acts on a rotating basis," Hamilton said. "We're trying to get some juice going on in the beer garden."

After years of creating movie shows for auditorium events, Joel briefly staged a series of living room movie shows. Including a screening in the house where the film Carnival of Souls was originally shot. These small-scale shows were usually for audiences of between ten to twenty people. These were kind of a transition between M.T. Pockets Budget Film Fest and The Basement Sublet of Horror, held from 2006 to 2012.

THE BASEMENT SUBLET OF HORROR

The Lawrencian • August, 2006

a Lawrencian interview by Anne Tangeman

Joel Sanderson, computer whiz, artist, and long-time film archivist, has resurrected the legacy of the late night TV horror fest, with a twist, to Lawrence's public access channel. Public access channel? Yes—channel 99, which comes with basic cable, is usually a steady stream of religious programming and QVC shopping shows. Joel was able to land the sweet spot of 11 p.m. Friday nights to broadcast his "Basement Sublet of Horror," a classic late-night horror show complete with scary host Gunther Dedmund. Sanderson "frankensteins" an old horror film—cutting out the parts that drag and adding in bits of film from industrial and educational films from years gone by. It's classic fright-night fun with many surprises.

The debut episode featured "Atom Age Vampire" interspersed with "duck and cover" nuclear preparedness films, how to make the perfect cup of coffee, and a dainty bit with a 1950s teen getting advice from her mom about burgeoning feelings towards boys. Joel, who has been cutting up films for years with his Escape Drive In and MT Pockets Budget Film Fest, spoke with me recently about his latest project.

How did you come up with the host, Gunther Dedmund?

The characters come to me in dreams I have. Gunther Dedmund—the name was in a dream—hosting a TV show. This was a dream I had in the early '80s. It always just kind of stuck—and that someday I wanted to do a TV show.

Did you ever do horror make-up and such when you were a kid?

Yeah. I had all the Famous Monsters of Filmland makeup magazines...Tom Savini's book...I had all the stuff. I used to do like Harold and Maude... all sorts of gruesome things. I tried to take a course in makeup in college but I was asked to leave because the instructor didn't really like monster stuff.

Where do the films come from that you are using?

I'm using some of the films I have but in order to broadcast it, they all have to be public domain and they all have to have no copyright restrictions. That eliminates a lot of stuff I already have. (The room where BSOH is filmed) that's my work area in the basement. That's just one part of it too. I wanted to a more elaborate show. The premise was about a TV set that's kind of evil or haunted. If you were in the show say, you'd walk in the back door and there would be a TV with like a roulette wheel on it that spins around and has letters that spell out a genre. If it spells out 'horror' the TV comes on and it's Gunther Dedmund. Then there's a science fiction host, an adventure host...I didn't really want to be stuck in one genre, but in order to pull off the show, the cheapest way was the horror one because my basement is a ready-made set. I didn't have to build a set; I can just go down there and turn the camera on. Everything else is more elaborate. If this goes anywhere, like the next season, I might like to expand it into the full show.

How long is the season?

Ten weeks; then they're replayed. Ten weeks puts me to the first week of school in fall, then the replays put me one week before Halloween, so I can have a Halloween show.

What kind of cable access do people have to have to watch?

It used to be on a lower numbered channel but they just moved public access to channel 99. At this time, as far as I know, there's nothing but local religious programming on. I think I'm the only show that is something different, so they were actually kind of interested—they want more people to do stuff but there's a whole approval process you have to go through. You can't do anything commercial, you can't do anything political, so once you pass, and get producer approval—your public access producer—you can go ahead with your show. The time slots just depend on when they have an opening. For me they picked Friday at 11 p.m., which is perfect. That's what I wanted. They don't stay on past midnight, so that was perfect. I was surprised that a lot of people applied for it, but very few actually come through.

I was shocked by how much work it really took.

It looks very professional. When you were growing up did you have shows in Wichita that were like creature features?

Actually the opening of this show is a parody of Wichita's horror host because I was planning on doing this in Wichita too but Wichita isn't going to do public access anymore. The horror host show in Wichita was called "The Host and Rodney." The later shows had a house on a hill, the camera would zoom in, there was a light on in the dungeon and the camera would zoom up to that window and cross fade into the dungeon set. So, that's my joke, since I live in a ranch house and grew up in a ranch house, it's just funny to me to have it be a ranch house.

What's in store for the next few episodes?

"House on Haunted Hill," "The Magnificent Gladiator," "The Brain that Wouldn't Die," and "The Last Man on Earth." I'd like to do a "Carnival of Souls" tribute, where I condense the film down and interview whoever is left in town—so do one serious show. And some friends of mine bought the "Carnival of Souls" house, so I could shoot the hosting stuff there. I've already got permission to do that.

Where do you get the films?

The majority of the films are from www.archive.org. It's a massive online information resource. They started carrying feature films. About a year and a half ago they started carrying DVD quality films. I can download those—it's already in digital form—and I can just edit that down. Plus, they list the copyright of the films. That gives me a ready-made documentation. The other films, starting in the late '80s, all the film libraries were converting to video. My name got out as a guy who would come pick up the film for free, so I drove all over the Midwest going to film libraries with my truck picking up all this stuff. There's just tons and tons of film that got thrown away. At one point, two-thirds of my basement was full of film and even I couldn't stand it, so I wound up getting rid of a lot of it. That film is harder to use because I have to run copyright searches on everything and provide documentation. It's easier for me to download from archive.org because I can just print out copyright status. Anyone can go there and download stuff and make their own TV show.

How difficult was it to get on public access?

They get a lot of applications, but very few people actually end up doing it. I show them documentation and they preview it and if it meets their standards of quality and their standards of decency. If you pass those two, there's no problem. There's some political stuff in the background of some of these films, but it's so slight—like the atomic footage...

Do you do it all yourself?

It would be nice to have some help, but up to this point, I didn't want to—it's so much time that I didn't want to commit people. There's no money. I've asked several people to help, but right now people just don't have the time. The biggest problem is shooting the bridging segments because I'm just sitting there with the camera and a monitor doing it over and over again. The other problem is that I can't see that well without my glasses. The glasses I'm wearing are my glasses from junior high, so I can't see a thing. So, it takes a lot of time. Plus keeping track of the sound levels, etc.

What's the hardest thing about it all?

Just being the host I think. I have a monitor next to the camera, but it's hard not to look at the monitor and talk to that. The majority of the footage I host is outtakes...

Who would someone talk to if they wanted to do a public access show?

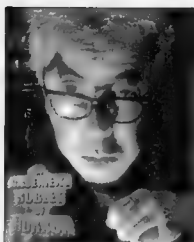

The thing to do would be to go to the sunflower broadband site, go to the Free State Productions page and there's a public access link on that page that gives a complete breakdown of the rules.

Check out the Basement Sublet of Horror on Channel 99 Fridays at 11 p.m.

UPCOMING

RedLefty

Despite the band's name, RedLefty, there's no need for audiences to go on a Communist witch hunt. The Lawrence ensemble just happens to have two members with red hair who also are left-handed. The local revolving-door group has instituted an early Jackpot slot every Friday, mixing up impromptu setlists consisting of swing, country, ragtime and blues. The band also acts as the bar-outreach segment of the Americana Music Academy, where most of the Lefties teach. The Swingin' Blues Happy Hour with RedLefty runs from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. today at the Jackpot Music Hall, 943 Mass.

MEDICAL REMEDIES

Minty fresh painkillers

Mint is great for sweet kisses or for covering up that lunchtime martini, but, as herbalists have long known, the menthol within its oils also soothes and cools the skin. Now scientists have discovered the basis for that property, known scientifically as cool-induced analgesia. Recently developed topical drugs could help people suffering from arthritis or chronic pain from nerve damage, with less chance of side effects.

JOEL SANDERSON plays demented TV host Gunther Dedmund on "The Basement Sublet of Horror." The comedy/horror series splices B-movies with various other materials, such as educational shorts, cooking shows, music videos and gladiator movies.

CORN ON THE MACABRE

Local TV host showcases rotten films in fresh way

By Jon Niccum
jnccum@ljworld.com

Perched upon a lonely cliff in Lawrence rests a ranch-style house under the shadow of a TV signal tower.

In its basement lurks Gunther Dedmund, a pasty, gray-haired, bloodshot-eyed scholar of horror cinema. Each week Dedmund unearths a "gem" from his collection — with titles such as "Atom Age Vampire" and "The Killer Shrews" — and presents it for the viewing pleasure and/or disdain of his cable audience.

You have entered "The Basement Sublet of Horror."

At least that's what Joel Sanderson would have you believe.

Sanderson is the alter ego of Dedmund. The Lawrence resident has almost single-handedly brought "The Basement Sublet of Horror" ("BSOH") to the screen, where it airs at 11 p.m. every Friday night on Sunflower Broadband Channel 99.

Gunther Dedmund - The Basement Sublet of Horror - Lawrence, Kansas

Gunther Dedmund is the host of the Basement Sublet of Horror. He has been collecting old film, living in basement apartments and attending college classes for over 45 years. Gunther claims to be afflicted with a rare disorder called "Shortfilixia", which was caused by his being struck by lightning at a drive-in theater when he was a small lad. Because of this "disorder", Gunther can only stay awake for movies lasting one hour or less. This works out well since the show is only an hour. Gunther condenses each film down to around 40 minutes, then inter-cuts various odd public domain film bits, cartoons or newsreels in to spice things up. The Basement Sublet of Horror is a unique movie show that has aired across the mid-west. basementsubletofhorror.com

Living Room unearths vintage footage of the Embarrassment

BY NICK SPACEK — JUN 19, 2012 10 AM

So a new Web series, Living Room, debuted last week, and the first episode features the Embarrassment. Included in the hourlong episode are four music videos, a half-hour live performance, and interviews with members of the influential Wichita post-punk quartet. This is all unseen stuff and fascinatingly entertaining. It's produced by Demolition Kitchen - the folks behind Lawrence's cable-access schlockfest The Basement Sublet of Horror - and hosted by Anne Tangeman, a woman who seriously knows her local music (having edited the much-missed Micromag zine back in the 1990s).

Demolition Kitchen Media, besides producing BSOH have also created several additional television programs, all based on old 16mm films. The first was inspired by the 1980s show Night Flight, called Living Room showing vintage VHS recordings. The second show featured old films inter-cut with folk music called Junkyard & The Rabbit.

BSOH ROKU CHANNEL 2014

In 2014 we were introduced to methods to bring programming to the Roku Internet provider service by Jon Ary of the show Fright Nights. We started the process using Amazon's video servers and uploaded a lot of the content that we've produced, also including Butch R. Cleaver's horror host program Meet Cleaver Theatre.

The channel performed well enough that Roku invited us to go onto their international broadcast tier, we began receiving comments from around the world as a result. Then Roku asked to promote our channel from the low-end tier to the mid-range, we thought this was fine so we agree. But, this greatly increased the bandwidth usage that our channel used and the free use of Amazon's servers was updated to a pay for use scheme which increased costs to around $1,000 per month. There was no way we could afford the increase unless, at Roku's suggestion, we began running commercial ads on the channel. The Escape' Drive-in channel was a good idea, but tough to manage on our limited budget.

AVAILABLE NOW

Saturday nights are about to get even creepier. The Basement Sublet of Horror will follow Night Frights with Evelle LeChat every Saturday night starting November 21 at 9:00 pm. Hosted by Gunther Dedmund, the show features not so classic films, mutated and spliced into something much more interesting. Gunther claims to be afflicted with a rare disorder called "Shortfilxia", which began after being struck by lightning at a drive-in theater when he was a small lad. Because of this "disorder", Gunther can only stay awake for movies lasting one hour or less. This works out well since his show is only an hour, thanks to Gunther condensing each film down to around 40 minutes. He then inter-cuts various odd public domain film bits, cartoons or newsreels to spice things up.

Join him this Saturday night at 9:00 pm as he performs cinematic surgery on The Screaming Skull.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN THE BASEMENT

Through the course of shooting hundreds of BSOH episodes, Gunther has shot a lot of behind-the-scenes photos. Here is a brief collection of some of the many images from over the years, Gunther is kind of a fanatic about documentation. Take a look around the basement with Gunther.

An overhead view of Gunther's film editing table, where he not only hosts but works on films.

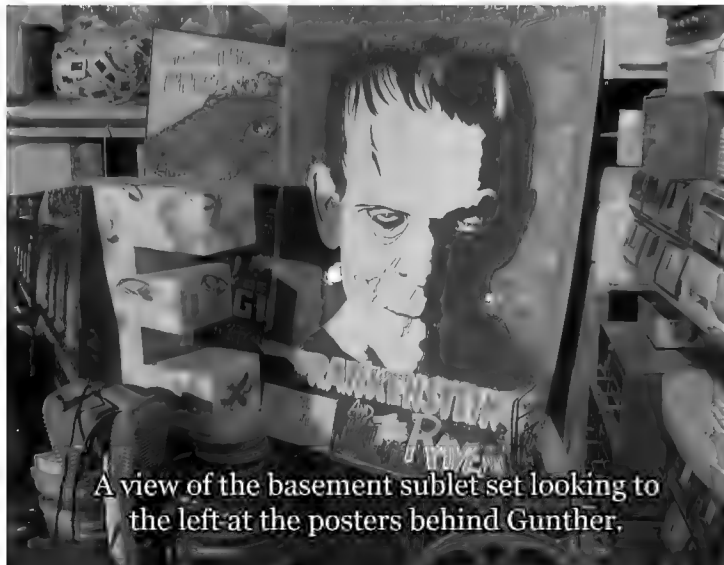

Gunther shooting an episode; most of the episodes were shot by him alone. He once set a personal record of shooting 21 episode-hosting scripts in one day, losing his voice.

PUBLIC ACCESS STATION BREAK TITLE CARDS

On a public access station, there's rarely a requirement for station breaks, unlike broadcast TV where they are required. These are TV station IDs that are shown at the top of the hour and often at quarter hours too, giving the location info on the station. In a broadcast TV, horror host shows used these breaks to give information about the movies, also stage skit, jokes, or pranks. Without the station break, there's no place for the host to return after the opening of the program. BSOH added in fake station IDs to imitate a broadcast show and make at least four breaks during the movie, at quarter hours. In Lawrence, on station breaks the broadcast station Channel 6 would show video clips of the community. BSOHs version of the station break originally showed community scenes that were usually bleak or an image that no station would allow since they were way too boring. Later, the BSOH station breaks would often turn into a kind of art display of photographs that we thought were interesting or that parodied the film shown.

THE SUBLET WITH THE CHEAP SPECIAL EFFECTS

Towards the end of the show's first season, Gunther became more interested in adding in low-budget special effects into the show. Here's a walk-through some of the effects and sequences where matt layers, color keying, and motion filters were used for the bulk of the special effects.

Gunther did a number of remote interviews, this is a reverse shot with Count Gregula.

Here are a couple more TV matts used for either interviews or remote video connections. To create the matt effect the neutral color field in these images is dropped and replaced with another image.

Gunther decided there wasn't enough clutter in the basement, he sometimes added in more films.

Warning From Space, this shows the planet Pyra. Gunther added in a real pie instead.

This page features an effects sequence from the Warning From Space episode, where Gunther meets the Japanese movie monster Gamera, the top image displays a matt of the back of Gunther's house.

Gamera appears from behind the hill in a threatening way, Gunther stands the door taunting him. Gamera flies away pooping on the roof as he leaves, while Gunther curses him inside the doorway.

In the end, Gunther packages the poop in tubs and sells on an online auction site, saying "You won't believe what people will pay for this crap!" There were only three tubs, the rest were matted in (right).

For The Horror of the Zombies episode, we brought in Jake's Mind Repair for this gory sequence. Where Jake gives Gunther a bit of brain surgery with blood spattering, meat chunks pulled out, and some brain-eating as well. The middle images are still images that the camera panned over.

The bottom row shows the meat chunks and the end surgery result with Gunther now speaking backwards. Jake was played by Fred Gutknecht who took things further than we expected, which was great!

Richard Wayne performed this sequence from the Last Woman on Earth episode, which features location shots augmented with matted in signs, shot in the basement of Lawrence's Liberty Hall.

Wayne unlocks a final door to reveal that the basement sublet was built on top of a nuclear missile silo.

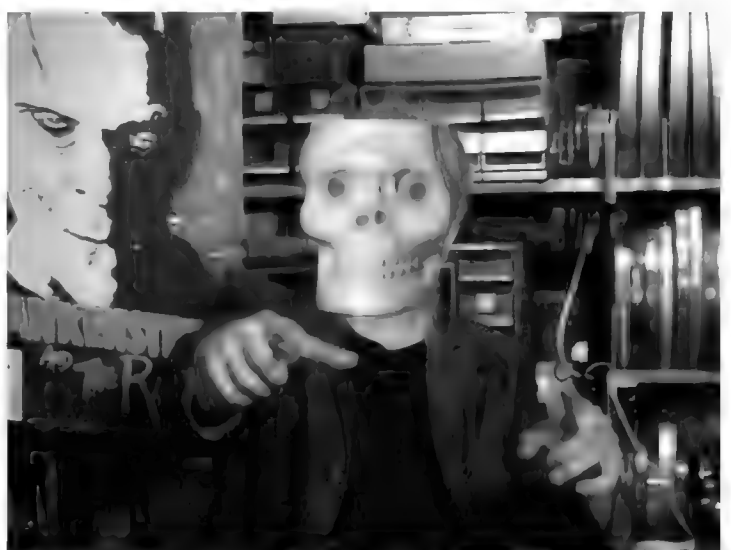

The missile launches, using an actual rocket exhaust plume footage. Not having an actual space suit, Gunther matted Wayne's face into some Centron films stock footage of an astronaut. Wayne read his lines wearing a plastic safety mask over his face, simulating the glare of the face plate of a space helmet.

In The Invasion of the Bee Girls episode, Fred Gutknecht returned as The Emergency Guest Host. The first image shows the elaborate host signal sequence with fireworks overlaid, plane fly-over and signal.

The sequence continues with a series of Host travel shots, here Fred peers out of an airplane.

Another episode featured Gunther possessed by The Laughing Skull. A floating video matt was used.

Here's two unused gore sequence images, the first where Gunther's head was to be cut off, then pulled out of a bucket (left). Richard Wayne shot Gunther in the head to take over as the show's host.

During Gunther's presentation of the original Fast and the Furious, his secret bat cave garage was revealed for the first time, along with The Gunthermobile. Here are is an exterior view and the garage.

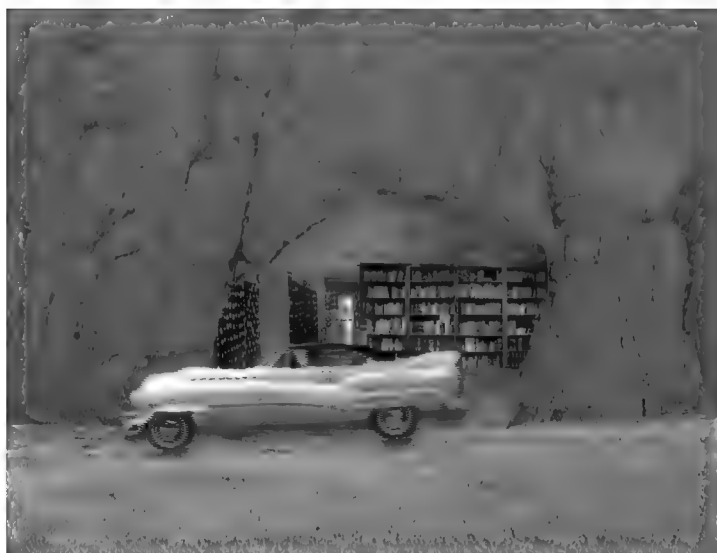

Gunther gets a call about free films being thrown out, he exits the basement through an emergency chute.

Gunther slides down the chute as his garage door slides slowly open, all done with multiple matt layers.

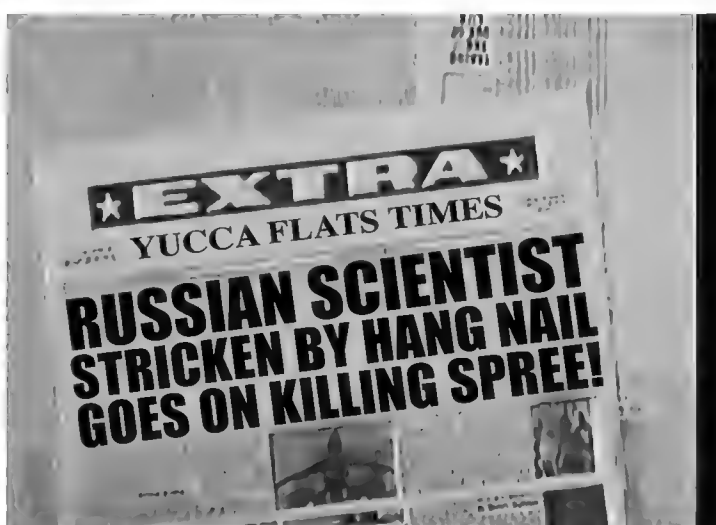

The sequence continues, with Gunther driving away from the garage in the Gunthermobile.

Here are several views of Gunther in his car, with video matts of him talking while in transit. Background video footage of driving down a road was shot in a separate shoot with the camera mounted in the trunk of Joel's car.

On the left is the matt version of the final Gunther driving sequence (above right).

Gunther reused his newspaper gag during his presentation of The Beast of Yucca Flats.

(4.) First layer of house layout, house is flipped for better orientation to scene, basement window is enhanced for clarity, driveway extended to sides (painted), and antenna behind house added (separate photo).

THE MAKING OF THE BSOH HOUSE ON THE HILL

(9.) Cloud layer created, wide length so it can be scaled to move behind house using FCP motion filter.

REDO - UPDATED EPISODES

has been updated with a better version of the film used to close the episode, which is also slightly re-edited to hopefully make the gag more clear.

#132/#156/204/256 "The Beast From The Beginning Of Time" Even though I said in this version that it was the complete episode in the previous version; it was still trimmed down by 10 minutes. It's now been restored to the full version, reissued as episode #156 with some extra features and new hosting segments. It was reissued again after the death of actor/director Tom Leahy to include even more stills, video interviews, and another addition hosting segment. The final update added with two more hosting segments that mention Tom Leahy's death and the publication of a book on the movie's star Ralph Seely.

#140/157/180 "Corridors Of Evil" a condensed version of Carnival of Souls was shown in this version, the re-do has restored the full version of the film with newly shot stills of a current look at the interior of the church from the film, although I still had to trim it down a bit to fit into 90 minutes including my extras. Re-issued as episode #157, then as a full two-hour version with the addition of John Clifford interviews plus new hosting segments shot in the house where the movie was filmed in episode #180.

#141 "The Atomic Brain" New version is cut using complete original film, includes two unused segments of Scott Phillips as Gunther's landlord.

#127/186 "Werewolf in a Girls Dormitory" Reissued as a full-length movie version with Gunther's dialogue of "Time share living" redubbed to say "Time Share Funeral Plots" which is more appropriate for the show, suggested by Jeff Kilian.

#120/185 "Santa Claus Conquers the Martians" Reissued as a full-length movie version with an elf face graphic placed over Gunther's assistants face to mask his identity.

2014 BSOH OPENING CREDITS UPDATE

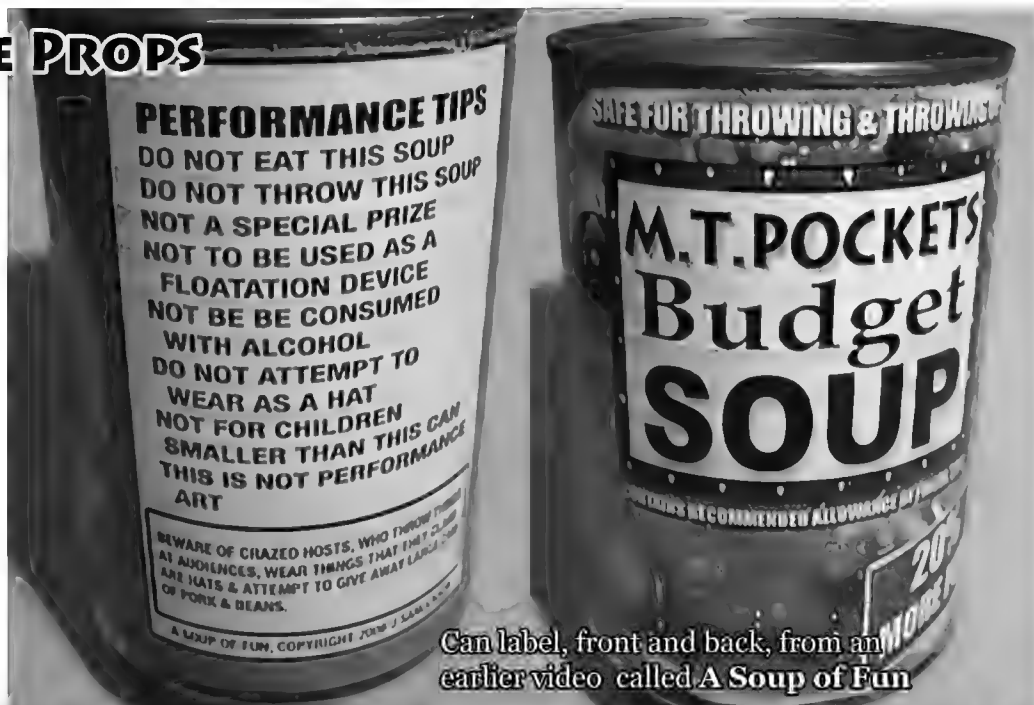

In 2014 we decided that the opening credits of BSOH, which had already run eight years with only minor changes, should be updated to a new more dramatic over-the-top version. A new collage of images was built, this time using the actual ranch style home where all of the early BSOH episodes were shot, placed on top of a hill completely out of place for its location in Kansas. This is the result using an oversized format so that the opening scene could start at the bottom with the swamp, then slowly pan upwards to the ranch house on the top of the cliff. We even included a new shot where you peer into the basement window. This version takes the parody of the original opening from the Wichita horror host program Nightmare to an extreme.

The new addition to the opening credits, a view into Gunther's basement sublet apartment.

BSOH EPISODE PROPS

A number of props needed to be made for the various Demolition Kitchen Media pro-ductions. Here are some of the props made for either BSOH or other video documentaries shot previously. Gunther likes to make items that are very detailed, with so much of the detail never visible on screen. Or, as a stand-alone gag added into a video just for fun.

Can label, front and back, from an earlier video called A Soup of Fun

Can label from The Killer Shrews episode.

Fake meat jerky from The Giant Gila Monster episode. in packaging

A Gunther puppet built by The Felt Show in Chicago, a gift from Tim Manning.

A fake UFO book prop (cover only) used for the Teenagers from Outer Space episode.

OPENING CREDITS BANNER PLANE FLYBY MESSAGES

Beginning with episode #143, The Emergency Guest Host, we started adding an airplane flyby into the opening credits of the show. The speed of the plane was deliberately set too fast so that the message on the banner trailing behind would be impossible to read. Here are a few of the airplane banners, used in the opening credits for a number of episodes following #143. Shown here legibly.

WARNING FROM SPACE: FAKE NEWSPAPER HEADLINES

From episode #134, Warning From Space. The original film had those classic dramatic plot point newspaper headlines, that would spin into the frame for added effect. Gunther couldn't resist taking a frame grab of one of the original newspaper images from the film, then altering it making his own versions of the headlines to use in the episode. These are the headline stills that Gunther added to the BSOH version of the condensed film featured in the episode.

GUNTHER'S FAKE COMPUTER SCREENS

Throughout the run of BSOH on public access, Gunther was featured in a number of episodes working on a computer. Since the light from an actual monitor is difficult to shoot against, fake computer desktops screens were created and inserted into the scenes in post-production.

Here are a couple of the computer screens used, the first is from episode #134 where Gunther battled the Japanese monster Gamera. Gamera defeats Gunther by pooping on Gunther's house, Gunther then decides to sell Gamera's poop online for profit.

2016 Free State Comiccon welcomes: JOEL SANDERSON

BSOH PROMO VIDEOS

BSOH produced a large number of promotional spots for a variety of events and conventions, including Horrorhound Weekend, The Free State Comic-Con, as well as Horror Host Shout-outs. Gunther Dedmund was often featured as the host in the spots. Later the spots began using simple animations based on the key promotional artworks for the upcoming events. Here are a few examples.

JIM ERICKSON - GUEST HOST SHOOT

BSOH was fortunate enough to have a visit from Wichita television host Jim Erickson, who's played the character Ol' Flick for many years. Ben Urish brought him up to Lawrence for the shoot. It was great to work with Jim, we shot hosting sequences for two episodes.

FREQUENT GUEST HOST RICHARD WAYNE

Early on in the BSOH series, frequent guest hosts began popping up, including a newscaster who lived in another apartment in the basement sublet. Richard Wayne would often host special episodes, interrupting the broadcasts with insipid comments, later he would become a rival for the main hosting spot on BSOH. The conflict continued getting stranger as time went on and was never resolved. The character of Richard Wayne was a cross between Walter Cronkite and an inept broadcaster from Wichita that Joel worked with on a UHF channel.

BSOH GUEST HOSTS

Over the years The Basement Sublet of Horror has brought a number of performers to the show to appear as either guests or guest hosts. Here's a listing of some of the guests that we had the most fun working with or persons who helped out the show on the technical side. We'd like to make a big shout-out to them all and thank them for helping to make this project work and survive for its long extended run on public access stations across the country.

THE MAKING OF THE COMIC BOOK'S COVER WITH ARTIST GREG SMALLWOOD

We were lucky enough to meet local Lawrence comic book artist Greg Smallwood, artist of the Dark Horse comics release "Dream Thief". He was nice enough to fit us into his busy schedule to create the cover for this issue. The following panels are the rough versions that Greg sent to us while he developed his ideas for the cover.

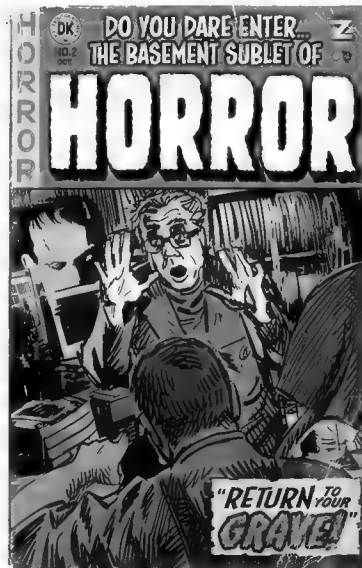

Originally we suggested that the artwork imitate the style of 1970's DC horror comics, but Greg took things into a different direction by working in the style of artist Jack Davis and creating a EC style cover. It turned out really great and we were very pleased with his work. Thank you Greg, we hope your future brings more incredible works.

GUNTHER DEDMUND PORTRAITS

Whenever BSOH attends a convention or meets an artist online, it's hard to resist having them do a portrait of Gunther Dedmund for our collection. We've had the honor of meeting a wide range of really great artists during the run of the TV program. Here are some of our favorites.

GUNTHER'S HOLIDAY CARDS

Through the years, Gunther Dedmund, being a weirdo graphic-artist type freak, has produced a number of holidays cards for posting online to fans. Here's a selection of the better cards.

In 2014 the website was redesigned using the new opening sequence graphic and the new sublet house.

The earliest Demolition Kitchen movie show website online was for The M.T. Pockets Budget Film Fest from 1998. BSOH borrowed a lot of film and edited movie content from this previous show.

BSOH created a website for the Horror Host Hall of Fame in 2013.

YOUR EYEBROWS ARE GETTING HEAVY!

For some reason, which we can't explain, host Gunther Dedmund's eyebrows and make-up keep getting heavier and heavier during the run of the show. On this page we explore the changes in Gunther Dedmund's appearance through the years, using the BSOH collector card set. Here are the many brows of Gunther.

VIRTUAL HORROR CONVENTION

Home Tickets Merch Hotel Events Contact Store

In 2012 BSOH staged an elaborate online prank, a Virtual Online Horror Convention even creating tickets, guest interviews, along with a souvenir T-shirt. Gunther had a great time putting this all together, just an unconventional convention parody that maybe hits too close to home for some people. Well, it's all in fun and part of the humor of BSOH, which is a dry sense of parody of the horror genre.

Here are some screen shots from the original web site.

- AMAZING FILMS
- SPECIAL GUESTS
- WONDEROUS MERCH
- SCARY BREAD

BSOH VIRTUAL CONVENTION SCHEDULED EVENTS

All events are included with paid convention admission.

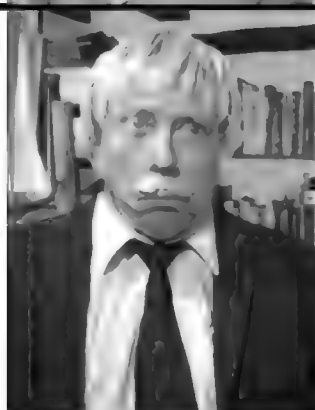

Ronald Trenenbaug, Director of "The Horror of Bread Trilogy"

SPECIAL PRESENTATION APPEARANCE:

Convention Screening Room, 8 p.m. Friday

We're extremely excited to bring Ronald Trenenbaug to our convention for a personal screening of the entire "Horror of Bread Trilogy," all five hours in one evening. Preceding the showing Ronald will stage a short history of the film including his childhood working in his parents bakery followed by a Q&A session. Here's rare opportunity to learn more about this fascinating director and taunt him with small loafs of bread (which we will provide).

Robert T. Brick, Director of "The Creeping Shoes"

LECTURE APPEARANCE:

"Planning Your Career Film"

Main convention ballroom A, 8 p.m. Saturday

Robert T. Brick, director of the '70s horror classic "The Creeping Shoes." In his first lecture appearance at the BSOH Con he'll teach you everything you need to know to get that one film made, then how to spend the rest of your time scheduling lecture and convention appearances. It's an effective strategy for survival in the modern film world; you'll be amazed and inspired at just how far, or how low a person will go to keep from working again.

Richard Wayne, Anchor for Channel News Action Team

LECTURE APPEARANCE:

"Writing Fake News for a Fake World"

Convention exhibition room C, 4 p.m. Sunday

Richard Wayne has been a news journalist for the past 20 years covering a variety of stories for the public access news program "Channel News." He leads their "Action News Team" with hard hitting stories about local food, gossip and zombie attacks. In his first public appearance ever. We are excited to present this lecture where he "Spills the beans on journalism" and that it doesn't matter because it's all completely fake anyway.

Gunther Dedmund, Host of The Basement Sublet of Horror

SPECIAL PRESENTATION APPEARANCE:

"Of Horror, My Life Of Fear!"

Convention storage room A, 6 p.m. Sunday

Horror Host Secrets. The well-known horror host and film historian will be presenting examples of his early works, comments on the state of horror hosting and a short talk on "How to be a Horror Host."

THE BASEMENT SUBLET OF HORROR

BSOH CONTRIBUTOR & FRIEND SHOUT-OUTS

A. Ghastlee Ghoul

When we started thinking about making a horror host television program, we started researching what was going on with current hosts. Unfortunately, there was very little information out there about current hosts, I found out later that this was because hosts aren't very good at setting up websites that can be found easily. The hosts that I did find that were quite active were Count Gore de Vol, Mr. Lobo, Dr. Gangrene, and A. Ghastlee Ghoul. He was part of the Horror Host Underground, a public access circuit where tapes of host shows were passed around to different regions and played on all-night marathons. We came into contact with HHU and sent them a copy of one of our shows and they liked it. A. Ghastlee Ghoul responded saying that he thought it was really funny and that he liked the title. This was the first time that BSOH was shown outside of Kansas, thanks to A. Ghastlee for that.

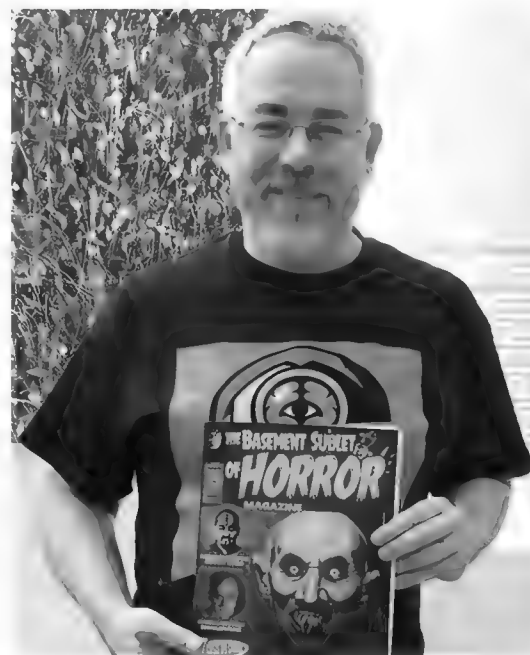

Bradley Beard

During the production of his series on horror hosts, I met Bradley on Facebook and sent him the information that I have on horror host backgrounds. Bradley was featured in BSOH magazine issue #4 and also did the cover art. A very talented artist, I hope his career continues to grow.

Corpse S. Chris

Chris runs one of the main website/blogs about horror hosts and has been very supportive of BSOH for many years. He also produced a series of really well-designed horror host collector cards and invited Gunther to be included. Chris has done a lot to make new horror hosts better known to the public as well as digging through the past for many obscure media references to the classic older host. Thanks, Chris, it's been wonderful to have been included in your ongoing history of the horror host medium.

Richard Chamberlain

He came into the BSOH scene through the magazine as he'd written a piece on Wichita horror host Tom Leahy Jr. film The Beast from the Beginning of Time for the B Movie Man blog. Since the early issues were a problem to fill with content, I asked if I could reprint his article. This began a collaboration that stretched through to issue #8 where Rich and his friends wrote tributes to film-maker Christopher R. Mihm. Rich was very helpful throughout his run writing for the magazine and we completed two special issues on Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi.

Brian Easterling

Out of all huge number of horror hosts we've met throughout the run of BSOH, Butch R. Cleaver better known as Brian Easterling is right at the top of the list. He's collaborated on a number of episodes with us, some shot remotely via a green screen in Brian's basement during the weekend we attended Horrorhound Weekend in Cincinnati. He also took part in our Escape' Drive-in Roku channel project, contributing a number of his episodes. He's always been very generous, helpful, and open to ideas. It's been wonderful to have him to interact with.

Richard Davis

Richard has been very supportive of BSOH from pretty early on, he's performed as some of the odder characters in the run of the show. First as the reoccurring character Aunt Bertha, sister of the previously deceased Aunt Ertha, then in our Carnival of Souls special as Lester the Ghost. He's also been very helpful with some of the background production elements.

Jim Erickson

As one of Wichita, Kansas classic television hosts. Jim has been a supporter of the Demolition Kitchen movie projects from almost the beginning. Jim attended a great number of the performances of the precursor movie show to BSOH, M.T. Pockets Budget Film Fest and even guest hosted a performance in 2013, Ben Urish was nice enough to drive Jim up to Lawrence to shoot several BSOH episodes as a guest host. We've been fans of Jim Erickson since the early 1970s and it's been great to get to know him. We're forever grateful for his interest, correspondences, and support.

Bill Goffrier

We've been fans of Bill's music for many years along with his artwork. When BSOH magazine first started production we talked with Bill and found that he had an interest in classic monster movie magazines, like Famous Monsters of Filmland. In Bill's younger days he was a fanatic reader of that magazine and even won a make-up contest staged by Famous Monsters. He's also a fan of one of the most prolific cover artists for that magazine, Basil Gogos, saying that he'd always wanted to paint in that style. BSOH commissioned Bill to do a painting in Gogos style, the result was the cover for the first issue. He's an amazing musician and artist, we're extremely happy with his cover artwork he painted for us.

Lance Hayes

Hayes was a film professor at Wichita State University when Joel met him in the middle of the 1980s, not as a student, but as a staff worker who set up the equipment for the film classes. Since Lance arrived early for his film classes we often had long conversations about films and behind the scenes movie trivia. Many years later, Lance reappeared through Facebook and we returned the conversations through email. Since Lance was the director of the Wichita made movie King Kung Fu, we really wanted to have an interview from him for the BSOH magazine. Lance made this come true and it's been great being back in communication with him.

Brian Easterling also known as Butch R. Cleaver

Kris Hermanson

We really appreciate that Kris has had to sit through the endless hours of Demolition Kitchen recording sessions, movie show presentations, and video shoots for BSOH. The most supportive person for all of the many hundreds of projects produced over the years and also Joel's wife. None of this could have happened without her and we really need to thank more than anyone. She is a wonderful person, thoughtful, very supportive, and the best companion ever.

Rik Livingston

Rik is a long-time friend and collaborates for a variety of projects over the years, ever since meeting him in 1982 at Wichita State University. Rik provided most of the artwork for both of the BSOH comic books and contributed artwork for the magazines as well. Thinking back through all these years Rik has greatly enriched our lives with his wit, spectacular skill as an artist, and wonderful friend too.

Tim Manning

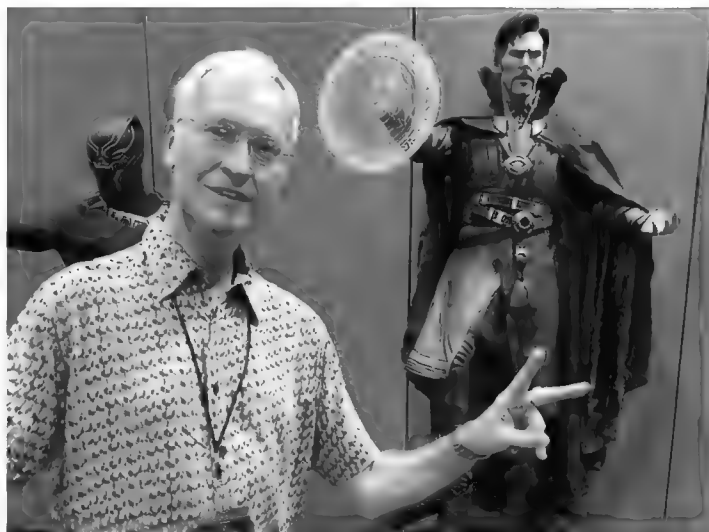

Tim is a video producer from the Lawrence area and came into BSOH production early on by bringing the show to Cox Cable in Kansas City. He later became involved with a number of the BSOH shoots, being dropped into many on-screen roles including Rusty Trees, Roger Slacks, and Kaw Valley Killer. We attended the 2010 Horrorhound Convention with Tim too, a weekend of over the top chaos that were glad Tim photographed. He also was responsible for our involvement with the Lawrence film festival The Wild West Film Fest. Tim Manning great technician, video producer, and friend.

Michael Monahan

I was indirectly introduced to Michael Monahan by Sandy Clark, Clark was one of the producers on a film about horror hosts called American Scary where Michael was the main consultant. Michael also had his own horror host character called Doktor Goulfinger and he attended the first full-scale horror host convention The G.O.T.H.I.C. Gathering in Indianapolis. We've corresponded through email many times since we met him at that convention, he's always been very generous with his time and knowledge.

David Nichol

David was the first person to help shooting the early episodes of BSOH, due to how difficult it was for Gunther to do everything himself. Having David in the studio was a great help since it gave Gunther someone to play ideas off of to see if they worked. This really changed things for the show since David guided Gunther's early performances, making them much better.

Michael Monahan, as Doktor Goulfinger with actress Rachel Grant.

Matt Orsman

One of the high-points of the long run of the BSOH televisions program was attending The Texas Frightmare Weekend in Dallas, Texas. One of the best run and produced horror conventions in the country, that always has a great guest list. Matt has been the key publicity artist for Texas Frightmare for a number of years, he invited Joel to come along to assist with his table. It was always a great experience, Matt has been a wonderful host and very gracious with his time and resources. It's hard to imagine being able to drink a cocktail with artist Berni Wrightson, talking with Denise Crosby, Dee Wallace, or meeting Virginia Madsen, Tom Savini, and even George Romero.

TFW artist Matt Orsman with Loyd Cryer, producer of The Texas Frightmare Weekend.

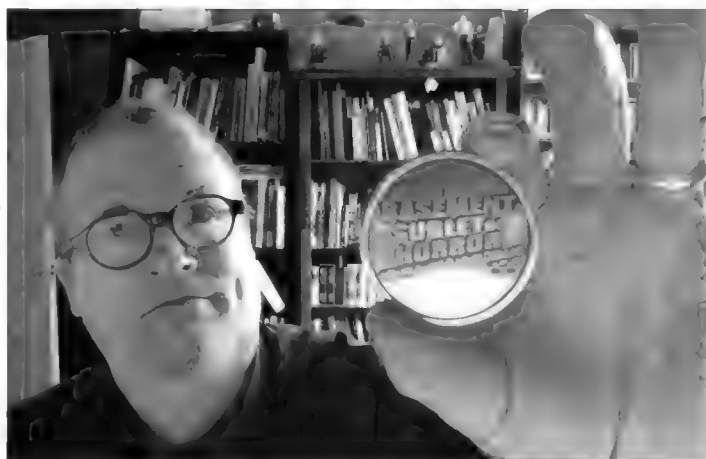

Larry Phillips

Larry was the across the street neighbor from the original Basement Sublet of Horror house in Lawrence. He began oil painting and produced a series of unusual occult based paintings, we liked them and commissioned him in to do illustrative paintings for the early issues of the BSOH publications. Great artist, who creates interesting works.

Scott Phillips

Another old friend of the Demolition Kitchen productions is Scott, he's been adding content to these productions since they began in 1985. He was featured on our early audio releases, recording under the character name Tex LeBeauf, who has appeared in nearly every version of the movie shows produced by Joel. He's always been open to jumping into whatever weird or strange concept that we dreamed up for him. He's appeared in several BSOH episodes as Tex LeBeauf, which by-the-way all continue the story of Tex which began in 1987, also he improvised the whole script for Gunther's landlord in episode #141. Thanks, Scott, it's been wonderful having you involved with creating interesting stories for such a long time.

KC Stanton

As a performer, KC Stanton has appeared as the host of the live Kansas City folk music review The Rural Grit Happy Hour and also as a giant red rabbit named Rap Jackrabbit. The rabbit started making appearances on BSOH invading the Halloween specials that aired on Channel 6 in Lawrence. Later, he appeared as Mr. Rule, the gravedigger who had originally buried Gunther Dedmund and continued to hunt him down over the years. KC did a great job of coming through when Gunther was in a bind for new content or live music.

Dave Toplikar

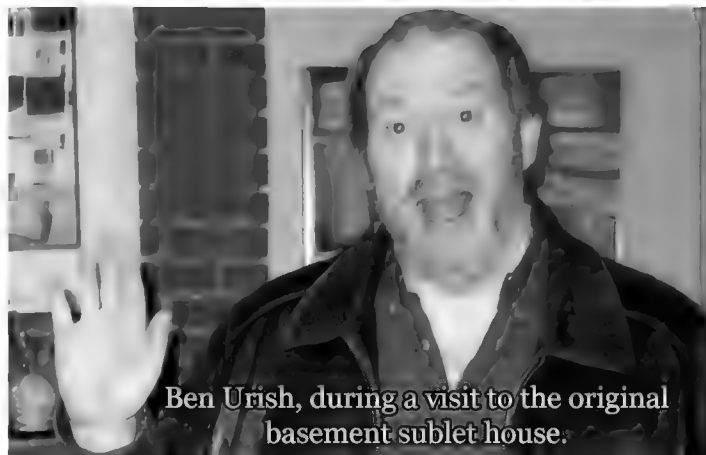

I met Dave in Lawrence, Kansas in the late 1990s, he hired me to work on the Journal-World newspaper websites. We kept in touch over the years and he's been immensely helpful with the production of BSOH publications. Dave has been the key proofreader for all of the issues, keeping things in order and often making sense out of Gunther's rantings. Thanks, Dave, the publications couldn't have happened without you.

Dave Toplikar, Man in Black, for his appearance at the Free State Comicon in 2016.

Ben Urish

Ben has been involved with Demolition Kitchen since the very beginning in 1985, performing on a number of the audio releases as Keith Gist and The Burbotz (a fictitious band from Parma, Ohio). Demolition Kitchen also produced a number of Keith Gist solo recordings and videos through around 2005. When we began staging the M.T. Pockets Budget Film Fest movie show, Keith Gist performed the music set during the show many times. Ben's contributions to the weird cause of Demolition Kitchen have been wonderful and we really appreciate all of this work.

Ben Urish, during a visit to the original basement sublet house.

Michael Varrati

I met Michael while he was still a writer for the magazine Bloody Disgusting at the first G.O.T.H.I.C. Gathering horror host convention at Horrorhound Weekend in Indianapolis in 2010. He was then working on a book about the history of horror hosts, a task that given the ever-growing numbers of hosts, I'm sure became overwhelming. He's been supportive of BSOH over the years and also a good friend.

Gunther Dedmund would like to thank everyone who's contributed to the show over the years. To all of the horror hosts, artists, musicians, video producers, actors, non-actors, co-hosts, technicians, photographers, video documentation camera persons, and above all the fans and viewers of his show. We hope you've enjoyed our attempts at entertaining you and that you had a good time watching the show. Let's see what happens next! - Gunther Dedmund

KEY:

FB = The Film Butcher edition, the feature film has been condensed to around 40 minutes and additional material has been added. These should be considered hybrid version of the feature film that are created as an exclusive parody by The Basement Sublet of Horror and Joel Sanderson.

Movie = Complete original feature film (some feature films have been edited for time)

Rating = Gunther Dedmund's rating of the episode

* - The episodes of Night Frights are the BSOH edit and are listed here only to add them to the BSOH inventory. This is NOT meant to appear that I'm taking credit for John Ary's or Evelle LeChat's work.

REDO - UPDATED EPISODES:

#112 "The Last Man on Earth" a single insert is added for when Gunther opens the door to his apartment during the second break. I didn't have the insert shot when I originally finished this episode of someone coming down the stairs with their laundry, mainly since I didn't have anyone to do this. During the shoot for "Night of the Living Dead," I shot the insert with Richard Wayne entering with his laundry.

#109 "The House on Haunted Hill" I found the original trailer for the film, so the episode was updated with the trailer as the opening segment (This probably is the version that you've seen)

#125 " " The original version of this episode was missing the recorded track of backwards messages from Satan to be heard while Gunther plays an LP record backwards, these have been added as well as a missing still of "Satan's Seeds" a promo that Gunther mentions and the ending of the film

GUNTHER DEDMUND IN YOUR HOME

THINK OF IT!
HE'S 6 FEET TALL!

(actual size may vary)

LIFE SIZE!

(depending on definition of life)

Too Realistic For It's Own Good!

Looks Absolutely Creepy!

Really out of this world-here he is, here at last: Gunther Dedmund himself, all 6 feet (actual size may vary) of your favorite (interests of of customers my vary) pale-skinned ghoul, now available in a full-size poster that you'll keep forever! (not responsible for parents chucking it later). This is the most bewildering 6 foot tall photo you ever saw! A definitely flawed masterpiece of reproduction that will startle and terrify anyone who sees it. You'll think Gunther Dedmund is actually in the same room with you and wonder... why?

The Gunther Dedmund poster will supply at least 2.5 hours of laughs (actual time of laughter may vary)! Think of the gags you can pull and the fun you can have with 6-foot Gunther! Have your photograph taken alongside this notorious ghoul; tape the Gunther poster to the inside of your basement den or bedroom door; ring door bell when friend answers, hide behind the full-size figure of Gunther leaving the blame to him! Over five dollars worth of ghoulish glee with Gunther Dedmund's full sized poster!

MANY USES... as a giant-size poster in den or playroom. as a gag on the inside of a closet door, on a ceiling, etc. Use it to train problem pets, to cover troubling holes in room walls, may be used as a torture device by foreign or domestic governments. As a party gag, put one in the garage - but don't tell anyone. Wait and hear the outrageous sighs of disappointment.

Replacement Back Guarantee If Not 100% Satisfied with Gunther Dedmund

(not responsible for actual disappointment which may occur)

The Dead Next Door is a blog that explored regionally made horror films from all over the country, BSOH contributed information about Kansas made horror films. Their research was turned into a published book called Regional Horror Films, 1958-1990: A State-by-State Guide. BSOH has contributed to four published books over the course of the years.

What's the Matter with Kansas?

The Beast From the Beginning of Time (1965) Wichita, Kansas

When Kansas horror host Tom Leahy (a.k.a. "The Host") died earlier this year, he not only left behind several decades worth of fond memories for Wichita residents who had grown up watching "The Host and Rodney," he also left us with some half-whispered rumors about an otherwise unheard of movie called The Beast From the Beginning of Time.

Leahy starred as an unearthed caveman who is driven to kill whenever he hears the sound of thunder. Produced by the staff of local TV station KARD, the film remained unreleased until it finally debuted on Wichita television in 1981. It later screened at the Wichita Orpheum Theater in 2005.

Wichita Radio Archive - Tom Leahy And Friends

It also aired as an episode of Joel Sanderson/Gunther Dedmond's Basement Sublet of Horror, and you can view the entire episode featuring this rare film here.

While I was researching The Dead Next Door, Sanderson helpfully provided a copy of the film, along with another Wichita flick called King Kung Fu (1976) in which Leahy appeared, and the newspaper article below that was published before the film's TV debut.

You can also download the B Movie Cast podcast about the film here.
